

"Discriminatory practices that impair community life among Christians are frequently denounced by authors in quest of biblical equality. This book takes the thoughtful reader a step further. It identifies the root cause of such practices as the systemic curse of the patriarchal rule that resulted from the fall. Not only does this work provide us with a careful analysis of the nature and workings of patriarchy, but it also presents a vibrant challenge to repudiate the legacy of sin and to uphold the standards of redemption in Christ's new community."

Gilbert Bilezikian, Professor Emeritus, Wheaton College

"In addressing head on the topic of patriarchy, Del Birkey has uncovered some challenging materials that bear on the gender issues in the Catholic, Orthodox, and Evangelical church traditions. The patriarchal system is squarely confronted and exposed to full view with its manifest consequences for male-female relations. I warmly recommend this book to all concerned to understand what patriarchy is, and how it may express itself harmfully in the modern Christian family and church."

Alan F. Johnson, Emeritus Professor of NT & Christian Ethics, Wheaton College and Graduate School

"Patriarchy is essentially control by men. Del Birkey has done a masterful job of showing how patriarchy is the basis for discrimination against women everywhere, and why it is irreconcilable with biblical equality."

Virginia Patterson, former board chair, Christians for Biblical Equality

"This book demonstrates a passionate commitment to biblical truth and careful scholarship. Detailing the source of male social dominance, Del Birkey shows how patriarchy developed into a web of assumed sociological correctness and the many ways religious groups seek to justify exclusive male leadership."

Zondra Lindblade, Emeritus Professor of Sociology, Wheaton College
